

This statement is false. This statement is false.
This statement is false. This statement is false.
This statement is false. This statement is false.
This statement is false. This statement is false.
This statement is false. This statement is false.
This statement is false. This statement is false.

Different sets of truths – is what we know always the truth? If we live by only thinking in a certain manner, we don't stand to give ourselves room to consider other possibilities. Allowing ourselves to learn new knowledge and therefore develop justified beliefs, this is especially important in our process of evolution – if we don't learn to keep up with how society works, it's easier to get misunderstood and even outcasted.

This statement is false. This statement is false.
This statement is false. This statement is false.
This statement is false. This statement is false.
This statement is false. This statement is false.
This statement is false. This statement is false.
This statement is false. This statement is false.

This statement is false.

Too much, there's too many ads opened up. I know I need to clear them out but they are all so important as to what I want to find out. Each and every website provides essential content to the awareness on my issue. All the links make sense, they appear to be correlated and provide similar perspectives. All those clicks done has led me to have different perspectives. All those 18 opened and I need ads, each with lengthy essays writing to be analysed. Oh wait look at that, this provides yet another perspective that which I haven't thought of. Seems interesting and pretty quick to digest.
Let's just take a look. Oh no, it makes sense yet it really doesn't.
My brain struggles to connect the dots to enable a smooth figuring out new things.
All I've lost track of what I wanted to find out anymore.

Perfect, you've found the ideal results. How do they affect your research process, or even, how do values affect the way you think? Has your prior reviewing your values before and after a search. What do you believe in anymore?

Watch out for the car on your left – Watch, can't people hold their coffee straight anymore? Yes, now I'll have to make a trip to wash up. I can't afford to and I had a first meeting with my big client. Oh, I even will have the spare time though. I really hope thing go well, don't want to have stayed up for nothing, but it's okay to lose some rest if I manage to close the deal with clients. In this day and age, time means money.

Let thy thoughts analyse thyself.
Socrates once declared that an unexamined life was not worth living.
Are you living for clients or pinches or are you putting aside enough time and effort to think for yourself?
The tendency to lose ourselves in fast-moving societies is sky high,
and it can be seen as a collective effort. Everyone wants to earn cash themselves. Spare some time consider what you want to achieve in your life. It does not have to materialize or of monetary value, it's all within yourself.

A quiet and peaceful reflection is a luxury we cannot afford.

SEARCHING: LEMON MARTINI

Imagine a club event. Lemon martini... Free flow...!!
Sounds great. It is so nicely packaged that even the DJ himself is associated with the theme. DJ Lemonparty. But things aren't as nicely presented, because Lemon Party links you to a shock website featuring 2 elderly male engaging in very intimate activities. Yet usually these moments become share for a laugh. Yet usually these moments become life-changing and no doubt leave mental scars.

MEDIA ETHICS
PERSPECTIVES AND INVESTIGATIONS

T H E R E
I [REDACTED] N O
O I T R U T H
I N I T H I S
R E P O

I figured there are many versions of truth in this context, depending on how individuals want to portray them or someone else to the public. When you've learnt the facts, would you reveal them all? How about objectivity and fairness? Should practitioners in this industry make themselves in the reporting of information for the general public?

Are all reporters trustworthy? Do they do substantial investigation to cover all aspects? In a way they are all playing God to the public. They gather enough findings about anything and then